JAKE

- A white refrigerator; preferably with a bottom freezer
- A pedestal sink; also white
- a beat up disc golf disc for the dog and me
- any other old-fashioned or homemade lawn games
- heavy-duty pizza slicer
- broadax
- adz
- Bocce ball set
- Guitar, mandolin, and/or banjo strings
- Photovoltaic solar panels. These are just fine used. Maybe a guy at work will trade you some for a six pack.
- A claw-foot or just old-fashioned bathtub
- A set of timber framing chisel. These aren't you're ordinary chisels; they are much bigger and rather expensive. Ask Dave Newberg because he knows what they look like. He saw and used them. I think I would prefer any sizes from 1 to 2 inches. But they are kind of expensive, so a one inch chisel and a two in chisel would suffice. A corner chisel would also be desired.
- Chisel sharpening stones or a chisel sharpening kit
- Used instruments:
  - o Bongo drum(s) - freestanding, I mean without a stand, not too big - Jason Pauly might sell you one
  - o Banjo - a decent quality one
  - o Ukulele
  - o Harmonica Set
  - o Any instrument you could get Liz to play
  - o Dave Newberg's six string guitar if he no longer wants it
  - o Tambourine
- Cowboy boots? I don't know. They would have to come from The Boot Shack in St. Cloud and could not have pointy toes or be made of any exotic animal skin. Liz would also have to get a pair and they would probably be for the barn dance. But I don't know. I certainly don't want to be mistaken for some honkey just because of my goddamn cowboy boots. Anyway, they should be a darker brown leather, certainly no orange or redish tint, size 10B, not shiny and not too cowboyish, you know? I don't.
- A used trailer for the truck? Yeah that would probably be a good idea. Nothing too big. Ideally it would have larger tires that stick outside the platform. Maybe it could be six by eight feet, but nothing too much bigger. Ideally it would also have removable wooden sides or the capability to support them and then I could make some.
- A scythe blade sharpener. I think they are general purpose sharpening stones that are cone-shaped and mounted on a handle.
- A larger walk-behind lawn mower (specifically a Toro ProlineV) for mowing lawn next year. Used. It would probably be sold in the fall or following spring and I would give you back whatever I sell it for. What an investment opportunity.
- Socks
- Underwear
- Concert tickets - Andrea, you would have to get one for yourself too and come along.
- A ladder like Dave Newberg's - he knows which one and I think it's going to be Grandma's gift to us. I think it should be the largest one available and of good quality.
- A 2010 Weatherguide daily planner type calendar. Not the monthly one, the weekly one.
- Any books? Maybe
- A weekend of help down in the hayfield preparing the timbers for our new dwelling.
